

COVID-19 Update:

A message from Eric Beavers, Founder of Great Western Building Systems LLC

All of us at Great Western Building Systems know how much you and your communities are being impacted due to Covid-19, as we and our families are being impacted as well.

The ever-changing situation may have a direct impact on your plans to build. We recognize that you are excited about your project, and that the uncertainty may affect your building timelines. We have extended our 90-day price-lock guarantee to 6 months and are hopeful that this will allow you flexibility with your building plans in case you decide to build later than expected. We are eager to work with you on the design and engineering process now, so you can begin getting the permits and approvals needed.

Moving into the next few months, we believe you will also obtain discounted pricing for labor, concrete and construction costs.

In an effort to avoid any staff layoffs and to keep offering the services and products that have made us so prominent in the end-user steel building market, we have reduced pricing for new customers to the lowest ever offered by Great Western Building Systems.

Fortunately, our entire process is typically done remotely, up until the physical delivery of your building. Although we love having our customers visit us at the office, at this time we ask that you refrain from visiting to protect both you and our employees.

We are working hard to meet your needs, and to allow our employees the resources they need as well. Our building consultants and project managers will discuss your options moving forward to help provide the flexibility you need.

Sincerely,
